A Slaughter of Elephants. Among the arrivals on the Gaelic from the Orient was a quiet, blonde man in middle life, whose achievements in barbaric lands have been talked of around the globe. Few knew him, yet he has been received by kings, and for some years his deeds have been heralded everywhere by lightning. The dis-tinguished man was Lieut. Otto E. Ehlers, the famous German explorer, AY-FEVER THE CURE who first climbed the lofty mountain A particle is applied into each nostril and is of Killmanjaro, and who saved all that greeable. Price 50 cents at druggists; by part of east Africa to the German empire. He is just returning after some years in the strange, wild countries beyond the Pacific, and what he has to say is of extraordinary interest. He went to India after his arrival in Germany from Africa primarily to get a number of tame elephants with which to subjugate the wild ones of the Dark Continent, but this led him into many > that he went to Africa. It was the time that fierce wars were raging. He explored Killmanjaro, 19,890 feet high, being the first white man to set foot upon its crest. He also accompanied Major Wissman, the German commissioner in Africa, against the Arabs, and was with him in several other expeditions. In these exploits, Lieut. Ehlers had many narrow escapes, and to-day his face is scarred by conflicts on battlefields and in jungles.

Lieutenant Ehlers spent some time in the Garrows Hills in Assam with M. Savi hunting elephan's. In this he took great interest, because it involves a great ivory hunting and carrying project which he has in view in east Africa. His object is to form keddahs, or great corrals made of trees and roots, in the German territory in eastern Africa, where the difficulties in connection with transport animals are very great. Mules, ponies and camels die there are thousands of wild elephants Indian elephant catches are to be in-2,000 rupees a head to transport ele-phants from India to Zanzibar, but the Germans can easily stand the cost of what is needed. In a few years, cost of what is needed. In a few years, therefore, the African elephant will become something more than a mere ivory-bearing animal, to be slaughtered of the control of th wholesale. This plan, it is conceded, will benefit Englishmen and Germans gladly seen the English and the Ger-man governments joining hands in such a project, and he dwelt upon the fact that some 60,000 elephants are killed yearly in Africa for their ivory. "In Zanzibar alone," said he, some 500,000 pounds of ivory are brought every season to the market. There are tusks among them weighing from 150 ed with poisoned arrows. Perhaps fifty per cent. break away to die in the jungle, where their tusks are never found. So, perhaps, 20,000 elephants have been sacrificed to get the ivory for the Zanzibar market alone. Besides this, a lot of ivory is used in the interior for all kinds of domestic purposes. The tusks are used as grain pounders, &c., while ornaments are commonly fishioned of ivory. There are even chiefs in the interior who have a fence around their houses made of elephants'

It was in 1885, it will be remembered, off quickly in the African jungles, but waiting to be caught in the forests. On the slope of Kilimanjaro many herds are to be met with. Trained Indian elephants, mahouts, and a few native troduced there, and large catchers will be made every year. It will cost about alike in east Africa. The lieutenant said he would have to 160 pounds, and even more, but, of course, the tusks are mostly small; for it is much easier to trap or kill a young elephant than an old one. Let us say that on an average every tusk is from twenty to twenty-five pounds. The tusks of 10,000 elephants are brought annually to Zanzibar. "Elephants in Africa are mostly kill-
